Chapter 464: Sung Jin-Woo’s Evolution and the Creation of the Dominion Citadel

The Absolute One’s New Form

After countless cycles of time passed, the cosmos trembled as Sung Jin-Woo, the True Absolute One, underwent yet another profound evolution. His already divine form transformed further, symbolizing his unmatched authority over existence.

Third Eyelids: Like a guardian veil, a pair of transparent eyelids emerged, reminiscent of those possessed by certain earthly creatures like crocodiles. These eyelids granted Sung Jin-Woo enhanced perception, enabling him to witness hidden cosmic energies and dimensions beyond the comprehension of even the mightiest beings.

Planetary Compression: Sung Jin-Woo’s incomprehensibly vast form, once spanning a billion realms, could now be compressed into the size of a single planet when he so desired. This allowed him to move with subtlety and precision while still radiating immeasurable power.

The Throne of Dominion: His awe-inspiring throne, a construct of divine authority, was also condensed into planetary size. Its golden brilliance remained undiminished, a testament to his boundless might.

Four of his most loyal archangels, the Bearers of the Throne, followed suit, compressing their towering forms while maintaining their 2,400 wings each. They floated around their master like celestial guardians.

The Creation of the Dominion Citadel

Sung Jin-Woo raised his hand, and the vast energies of creation surged through the Godverse. From shimmering starlight, shadow essence, and celestial matter, he forged a monumental structure beyond imagination.

The Dominion Citadel, a fortress of unparalleled grandeur, emerged into existence. Its size spanned the equivalent of an entire solar system, with towering spires that pierced the fabric of reality.

The walls of the Citadel shimmered with divine runes, radiating golden, silver, and black hues.

Celestial rivers flowed through the fortress, carrying divine essence that nourished the entire structure.

Vast sanctuaries, chambers, and divine halls were crafted to house his most trusted celestial beings.

At the very heart of the Citadel lay Sung Jin-Woo’s Throne of Dominion, a seat of unimaginable power where he would preside over the multiverse.

The Third World Tree

Before the Dominion Citadel, Sung Jin-Woo planted the seed of creation. From it grew The Third World Tree, an immense and sacred entity whose colossal branches stretched across the entire Godverse.

Its leaves shimmered with cosmic energy, each one holding the potential for infinite life and creation.

The branches formed a protective canopy over the Godverse, symbolizing Sung Jin-Woo’s eternal guardianship.

Its roots reached into the divine sea below, drawing nourishment from the boundless energies of creation.

The Divine Sea

To support the grandeur of this new creation, Sung Jin-Woo commanded the bottom of the Godverse to be filled with a vast and shimmering Divine Sea.

The sea radiated with golden waves, representing the boundless essence of divine life.

It sparkled with fragments of starlight and cosmic energy, reflecting the infinite possibilities of creation.

The Dominion Citadel and The Third World Tree floated majestically upon its surface, an eternal testament to Sung Jin-Woo’s power.

A New Era

As Sung Jin-Woo surveyed his creation, the cosmos trembled in awe. The Dominion Citadel stood as the ultimate symbol of his dominion over the multiverse.

"Let this be the heart of creation, where justice, order, and balance are upheld for eternity," Sung Jin-Woo declared, his voice resonating across all realms.

The Bearers of the Throne and countless celestial beings bowed in reverence, their wings shimmering with divine radiance. The Third World Tree swayed gently, its cosmic leaves singing a hymn of eternal life.

Thus, the Dominion Citadel and the Godverse entered a new era, with Sung Jin-Woo reigning supreme as the True Absolute One.
